INTRODUCTION

My lifestyle

Hello there

Let us introduce ourselves to you

We are a team of doctors who are qualified in the management of lifestyle-related disorders like diabetes, hypertension, and obesity. Since the issue with these disorders is being overweight or obese, we can easily tackle this by changing ourselves by eating proper food, increasing our activity level, and engaging in various exercises that we can enjoy and sustain for a long time.

Do you know that losing only 5% of your body weight initially improves many of the symptoms related to diabetes and hypertension, and we can reduce the doses of medicines?

The problem with today's dieting pattern is that it's not optimised and designed to meet individual needs, and many people follow template-based diets or copy someone else's diet. Yes, they initially lose weight only to gain it all back in no time and get trapped in the vicious cycle of yo-yo dieting. There are many dietary patterns like low carbohydrates, ketogenic diets, high carbohydrates, low fat diets, etc. All the above-mentioned diets restrict one or more macronutrients and are not sustainable for a lifetime. The ideal balanced diet should have all the macronutrients and a good amount of micronutrients, and it should be easy, sustainable, and cost-effective. Dieting is not about eating fancy diet food, which is prevalent now a days and is a costly affair. One just simply cannot afford it on a day-to-day basis. The solution is a quantified diet, made in your kitchen.

The design of a diet needs some data, like age, gender, weight, height, and body fat percentage; the current diet pattern; the presence or absence of diseases; family history of illness; etc. The final diet should be a reflection of the data mentioned above. So now you know how just copying someone else's diet can impact your health in a negative way, even if you lose some weight following it. Dieting is not just about losing weight; it should give you more strength to do your daily tasks with ease and improve your immunity.

So now let's evaluate yourself and see how you can improve your lifestyle, either by losing fat or gaining muscles and strength, and make positive changes in your life by filling out this form. We will connect online or offline for better clarity, and we will help you understand or decide about your goals.

How quantified diet works ?

A "quantified diet" is a pattern of making food by measuring it, either cooked or uncooked. Measuring your food on a digital scale before cooking gives you its exact caloric value. Calorie is basically the energy present in food. We need to reduce calories to lose weight or fat, where your body releases the required energy for functioning from the stored fat. Likewise, we need to increase calories for weight and muscle gain. Gaining weight should be strategic without affecting your metabolic health. There are some recommendations about the rate of weight loss and weight gain. One should not lose or gain weight drastically. There should be a gap between attempts at weight loss or gain to contain metabolic adaptations and maintain hormonal balance. To maintain our current weight, we need to eat food in sync with our maintenance calories. Reducing or increasing calories for a particular goal requires consideration of many factors. One should not reduce or increase calories drastically to get fast results. It may have negative health and psychological impacts. Slight reduction or increment along with proper exercise works very well without affecting our day-to-day life and activities. Dieting is not about eating less; it's about eating right and exercising properly. What you need is a kitchen scale and the right guidance and willingness to make changes step by step. It takes 12-16 weeks to see all the positive benefits and changes in your body composition. One should be able to learn these things and make them a lifetime habit.

FOLLOW UPS

Connecting with us online or at our lifestyle centre regularly will help us both assess your progress. Regular follow-up brings out solutions related to habit building, hurdle's and difficulty adapting to this new lifestyle. It's motivating for both coach and client. A simultaneous health checkup and assessment can be performed, and alterations in medicines if any, can be made.

About Fee structure :

Consultation : ₹ 500

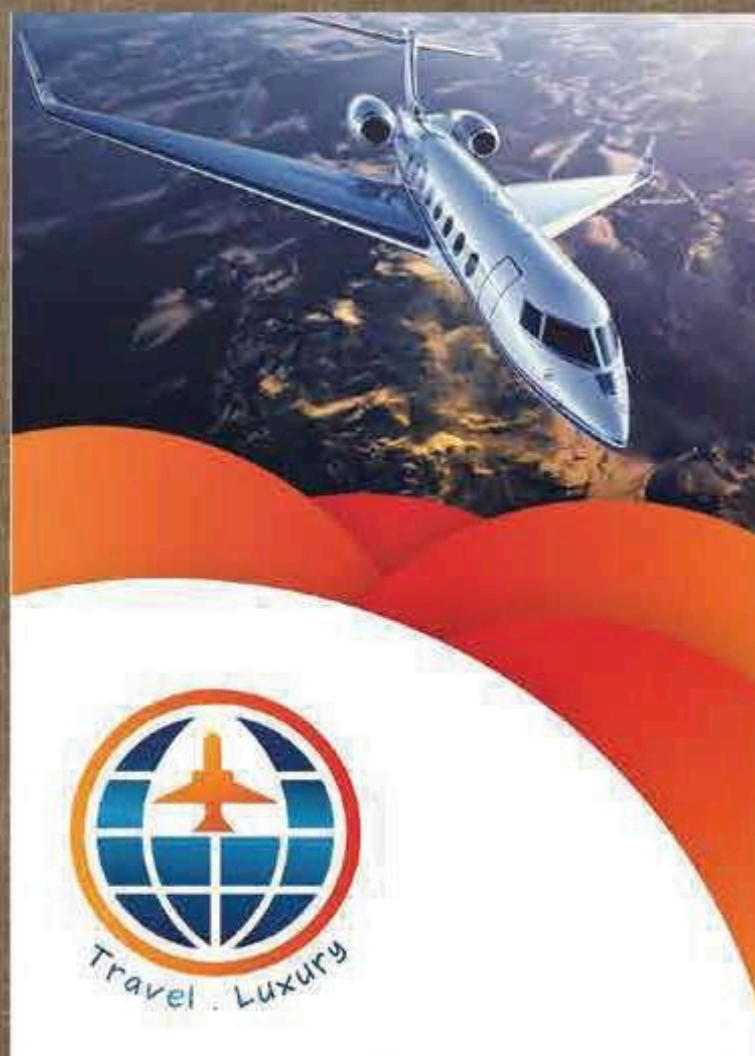

Counselling and designing of diet and exercise : ₹2000

Further follow ups : ₹1500

This pattern of fee structure gives you flexibility and options to consult with the coach whenever you want.

But if you want to have continuous supervision and WhatsApp support on a daily basis, you can opt for a one-time fee of 12000, which is valid for 12 weeks. After the completion of the plan, you can either renew it or opt for a per-consultation basis according to your further goals and needs. Our team will be with you at every step, from helping you develop new habits to improving your culinary skills. After all, eating right and staying healthy should not feel boring. Food should be palatable and interesting.

So let's start and try to become your best version.
